Admiral Stansfield Turner, USN
Director
Central Intelligence Agency
Washington, D.C. 20505

Dear Stan:

I understand that you are weighing my invitation to kick off our Distinguished American Lecture Series (DALs) on 20 October; please do accept. I agree with your view that lectures have limited utility, and accordingly I have reduced substantially the number of such invitations. However, given the missions of our two colleges, I do consider it important to have a few top national security officials discuss their perspectives on executive leadership and decision-making, along with the kind of talent and competence they look for in those who assist them.

But DALs is not the purpose of this letter. It is rather to try to interest you in a series of meetings, which will run one evening a month for six months, on the subject of "Strategic Access." We intend to deal with the problems of being able to get in and out of overseas locations for the full range of political/diplomatic/economic/military reasons. Certainly the subject is important, and we believe that the series could uncover areas for policy consideration. If the papers meet our expectations, we intend to try to publish a book on the subject.

Geoffrey Kemp from Fletcher and Harlan Ullman from our National War College faculty will manage the sessions, to include supervision of the preparation of six papers which we will distribute in advance to provide a basis for discussion. We hope to get 10 to 15 full time participants, with another 5 or so for particular sessions. We are shooting for senior people from both the public and private sectors, and are encouraged that General Maxwell Taylor, Bob Komer, Les Aspen, and Joe Jordan already have accepted. Enclosed is a copy of our tentative outline and list of those we are inviting to participate.

Our plan is to gather at about 1830 for sherry/cocktails, convene at 1845 or 1900 for a brief presentation based on the paper, have dinner followed by discussion, and break up no later than 2100. The only requirement for participants is to comment as they feel appropriate.

Obviously, we would value you highly as a regular attendee; but even if you do not feel you could commit yourself to all of the sessions, we would welcome you whenever you feel you could participate.

We look forward to hosting you here at Fort McNair!

Sincerely,

R. G. GARD, JR.
